attic	sorrowful	goose bumps	obedient	hesitate
-------	-----------	-------------	----------	----------

Max wasn't happy about staying with his scary grandmother in Bonn. But his parents had told him to be obedient, so when Grandma Hilde asked him for help, he didn't hesitate. Max went up into the attic, which was full of old things that needed organizing. He started exploring. Suddenly, he heard sad piano music. Frightened, Max climbed back down the ladder. The next time, when he opened an old trunk, he heard the sorrowful yet lovely music again. A man spoke to him, calling him "Ludwig." He and the man were both wearing old-fashioned clothes, and he was writing music. He was Beethoven—who was from Bonn—and the man was Beethoven's teacher, Christian! He heard the strange music again. Back in his own body, Max wrote down the notes he'd heard. They matched a piece of music in the trunk. He had goose bumps. When he looked around, Grandma Hilde was there, smiling. She'd known all along. Max decided she and the attic weren't scary after all.
