Russia is the largest country in the world. Because it is so big, different parts of Russia have very different weather and landscapes. There is a long coastline and many rivers. These resources make travel and trade easy. They have also made Russia an important place for thousands of years. However, Russia did not become a united country until 860. This is when the Vikings began organized rule. About 600 years later, they were defeated by the Mongols. Russia became part of the largest empire ever. Eventually, the Russians freed themselves. They were then ruled by czars. However, by 1917 they were treating the people poorly. People led by Lenin took over. Soon the country was renamed the Soviet Union. There were few rights or freedoms. This lasted until 1991. Today the Russia Federation is made up of people from many different cultures and religions. Russians have overcome many challenges. Today they are well-educated and have more freedoms. Russia is becoming better all the time.
