Christi was attending a summer camp. Her camp counselor, Mr. Brown, told her about a leaf stamp contest. Christi was excited about the prize for the competition. She started thinking about what she might win. She was thinking so much that she did not listen to Mr. Brown. He warned about certain kinds of leaves. Because of this, she picked the wrong kind of leaf. The leaf was very pretty. Both of her friends touched it. She pressed it and painted it. She was sure she was going to win the contest. However, Christi and her friends started to feel very itchy. They all got red bumps all over them. Mr. Brown looked at Christi's leaf. He said it was poison ivy. That was why they were itchy. Christi did not win the contest, but she did get a prize: medicine. Luckily, it worked. It made the itchy feeling go away.
